

Your toolkit: Being a bystander and first responder

---

Lisa Stockwell

Principal, Camben HR Consulting

Lisa is the Principal of Camben HR Consulting and works with law firm leaders and team members alike to help them provide the best service to their clients while experiencing true satisfaction at work. She brings a wealth of practical knowledge with over 25 years of experience in the professional services environment, including 20 years at leading Queensland law firms. Working closely with business leaders, Lisa successfully delivers practical HR solutions, strategies and advice to improve individual and organisational performance.

Lisa has a passion for neuroleadership and how that applies in the workplace, particularly in relation to performance development, coaching, leadership and other interpersonal interactions. Importantly she has a reputation for being approachable and empathetic while offering clear and practical advice that achieves the best outcomes for the firm and its team members. Lisa is a Certified Professional member of the Australian Human Resources Institute and a NLI Results Trained Coach.

---

Rebecca Niebler

Organisational Culture and Support Officer, Queensland Law Society

Rebecca has worked across a range of industries in Australia, with more than 10 years of diverse experience in organisational learning & development roles as well as facilitating cultural change programs.

Rebecca is passionate about improving employees' wellbeing, mental health and resilience, and creating positive thriving work cultures and effective leadership behaviours. She is also passionate about increasing the awareness of individual, social and economic benefits of diversity and inclusion in workplaces.

In addition to her psychology degree, she is accredited in the Hogan assessment tool and holds a Certificate IV in Training and Assessment. Rebecca is also the Secretary of Queensland Law Society's Wellbeing Working Group and Equity and Diversity Committee.

---